Hello from DEW Agency,

Learning about how our human body, cells are specialized to conduct electrical currents is part of our evolution. Electricity is required for our nervous system to send signals throughout our body and to the brain, making it possible for us to move, think and feel.

The energy output of the resting adult human body is equal to the power of a 100 W electrical light bulb. With a hard physical load, it could be up to seven times larger. All humans on Earth warm up the universe by 650 GJ of thermal energy every second by their mere existence—although, by virtue of technology, humankind's total energy output is actually 25 times larger. Each living cell contains millions of molecular machines. Other than macroscopic machines, these tiny machines constantly jiggle owing to the Brownian motion, so they frequently break down and must be continually repaired and restored. The basal energy demand is used for maintenance, repair and renewal.

By knowing this and more about the inner workings of our neurological system, will enable us to protect ourselves from criminal use of weapons technology that target and have the ability to bypass our own inner electrical mind & body networks.

In this issue, we have included some information about technology that connects to our neurological system to either relieve pain, treat, cure or convenience.

- Bio resonance technology - can be tuned in through your DNA information using sound wave technology. The science of bioresonance treats illnesses using electromagnetic frequencies. These frequencies harmonize the bioresonance of your body and its organs. Once restored, a rapid process of self-healing is started. Restoring your resonance restores your internal balance allowing all your organs to function as they should.

- ACCUVEIN - Vein Visualization For Informed Site Selection. AccuVein's vein visualization technology projects a vivid map on the skin detailing underlying superficial veins, bifurcations and intraluminal valves, often invisible to the naked eye.

- AlterEgo is a wearable system captures peripheral neural signals when internal speech articulators are volitionally and neurologically activated, during a user's internal articulation of words. This enables a user to transmit and receive streams of information to and from a computing device or any other person without any observable action, in discretion, without unplugging the user from her environment, without invading the user's privacy.
